Dagdrøm is Nadja's first proper full-length since their 2010 release Autopergamene (Essence Music) and, replacing their habitual drum machine, features live drums courtesy of Mac McNeilly from The Jesus Lizard. While Nadja retains their signature overblown sound and heavily distorted guitars on Dagdrøm, the songs are more concise and structured, tempering the experimentalism and ambience usually associated with the group with a more straightforward 'rock' sound and compositional style. As such, Dagdrøm looks both forward and back, marking a departure from Nadja's usual sound and style and harkening back to the noise rock scene of the '80s and early '90s to bands like Big Black, Caspar Brötzmann Massaker and, of course, The Jesus Lizard, all of whom were influential on Nadja's sonic development.

Nadja is a duo of Aidan Baker (guitars, woodwinds, vocals, drum machine) and Leah Buckareff (bass, vocals, accordion) creating music variously dubbed dreamsludge, metalgaze, and ambient doom, music which the atmospheric textures and elements of shoegaze and experimental/ambient with the heaviness and volume of metal and noise. Nadja has released numerous recordings on such labels as Alien8 Recordings, Hydrahead Records, Southern Records, Robotic Empire, and their own label, Broken Spine Productions. Nadja has toured and performed extensively around the world, appearing at such diverse festivals as Incubate, SXSW, FIMAV, Roadburn, and Unsound.

Originally from Toronto, Canada, Nadja is currently based in Berlin, Germany.
